

Getting Started

What does your user need to know to try your project?

This is a placeholder page that shows you how to use this template site.

Information in this section helps your user try your project themselves.

- What do your users need to do to start using your project? This could include downloading/installation instructions, including any prerequisites or system requirements.
- Introductory "Hello World" example, if appropriate. More complex tutorials should live in the Tutorials section.

Consider using the headings below for your getting started page. You can delete any that are not applicable to your project.

Prerequisites

Are there any system requirements for using your project? What languages are supported (if any)? Do users need to already have any software or tools installed?

Installation

Where can your user find your project code? How can they install it (binaries, installable package, build from source)? Are there multiple options/versions they can install and how should they choose the right one for them?

Setup

Is there any initial setup users need to do after installation to try your project?

Try it out!

Can your users test their installation, for example by running a command or deploying a Hello World example?

Tables should have bold headings and alternating shaded rows.

Artist	Album	Year
Michael Jackson	Thriller	1982
Prince	Purple Rain	1984
Beastie Boys	License to Ill	1986

If a table is too wide, it should scroll horizontally.

Artist	Album	Year	Label	Awards	Songs

Code snippets like `var foo = "bar";` can be shown inline.

Also, this should vertically align with this and this.

Code can also be shown in a block element.

foo := "bar";
bar := "foo";
```

Code can also use syntax highlighting.

```
func main() { input := `var foo = "bar";`

    lexer := lexers.Get("javascript") iterator, _ := lexer.Tokenise(nil, input) style := styles.Get("github") formatter := html.New(html.WithLineNumbers())

    var buff bytes.Buffer
    formatter.Format(&buff, style, iterator)

    fmt.Println(buff.String())

Long, single-line code blocks should not wrap. They should horizontally scroll if they are too long. This line should be long enough to demonstrate this.

Inline code inside table cells should still be distinguishable.

Language	Code
Javascript	var foo = "bar";
Ruby	foo = "bar"{

Small images should be shown at their actual size.

Large images should always scale down and fit in the content container.
